

Love. Lust. And Loyalty

yuimi vashum

Ms. Yuimi Vashum

English Literature (2008 – 2011)

Growing up amidst the mountains and the rivers, Yuimi Vashum is a passionate writer from North East India with masters in Journalism and Mass communication, and BA degree in English Literature from Stella Maris College. Determined to keep the stories of her people alive, of her life, and the struggles she grew up with, she wanted to become a writer. Through her work, she hopes to convey the emotions, feelings and humanity to her readers. Currently, she is working on her non-fiction on the WW II.

Love. Lust. And Loyalty

To Sing, to love, to forgive and never stop healing.

*Milaketh
Bathal of 2011*

“This volume is not a mere diary of confessions by a victim of sexual abuse. It’s much more. It’s poetry. Sensitive and confessional in tone; cathartic and liberating in its effect. Going through these poems, I recall Sylvia Plath striding ahead with a powerful voice that seared the veil of silence over the truth of female experience, way back in the Seventies. In her poetry, the “private” is laid bare, not with a sense of shame but with a dignity that attracts the attention of the female as much as the male reader with equal force. The personal becomes impersonal and the individual experience becomes everybody’s, across cultures and beyond continents. Yuimi’s poems have that kind of potential.”

Sukrita Paul Kumar

